Land Administration

New land administration analysts work in The Woodlands and Denver offices. Entry-level analysts are assigned to one of three major divisions of the department: title/leases, division orders, or contracts. Your job as a land administration professional is to protect the company's assets: its oil and natural gas leases and the wells that are drilled on those leases.

Accelerate Your Career

Anadarko conducts a summer internship program that opens opportunities for students to become a valued part of our team. As an Anadarko land intern, you'll gain real-world experience that will help you grow into a confident professional. You'll learn and grow by working on projects that have a meaningful impact on the success of our company.

Discover Your Potential

Anadarko employees are given the chance to work on challenging and rewarding projects across many horizons. We give you the responsibility from day one and provide the support you need to make meaningful contributions to our team. Our success is driven by great thinking, a willingness to share and grow knowledge and a common desire to find new ways to solve challenges. At Anadarko, you gain real experience and discover your potential.

"I initially wanted to work for Anadarko because it boasts a world-class portfolio, proven operational success and a highly respected reputation among industry peers. Although Anadarko is such a major worldwide player, the office environment carries the intimate feel of a smaller company, where colleagues teach and guide you to help advance your career."

"The Land Administration Dept. plays an integral role in the land function, which is so necessary to the successful exploration and production of hydrocarbons. A wide array of responsibilities continually challenge me and excite me about my contribution to the company's success and my own personal development."
